EXTENT OF CRISIS REVEALED

20,000 die each day

Mel White

Extreme poverty claimed more than 20,000 lives yesterday with numerous illnesses, including cholera, measles and diarrhoea, amounting for a third of the victims. For every 20,000 people are expected to die from treatable illnesses today - still again tomorrow.

The three biggest killers - respiratory infections, diarrhoea and malnutrition - each kills 10,000 lives, the majority of them children under the age of five.

More than 10,000 of the deaths yesterday were in just four African countries: Nigeria, the Democratic Republic of Congo, Liberia and Uganda.

Pravny O'Connor, 35, an Australian aid worker in Ethiopia with Médecins Sans Frontières, said her biggest frustration was the lack of affordable medicines, as most illnesses such as malaria, tuberculosis and AIDS are - a parasitic disease that can be fatal if left untreated.

"Eats away and weakens the body, tuberculosis is curable, yet the majority of Ethiopians do not have access to basic health care or life-saving drugs as they die," she told the Herald.

About 270 million people - 13 times the population of Australia - have died from poverty-related causes since 1990.

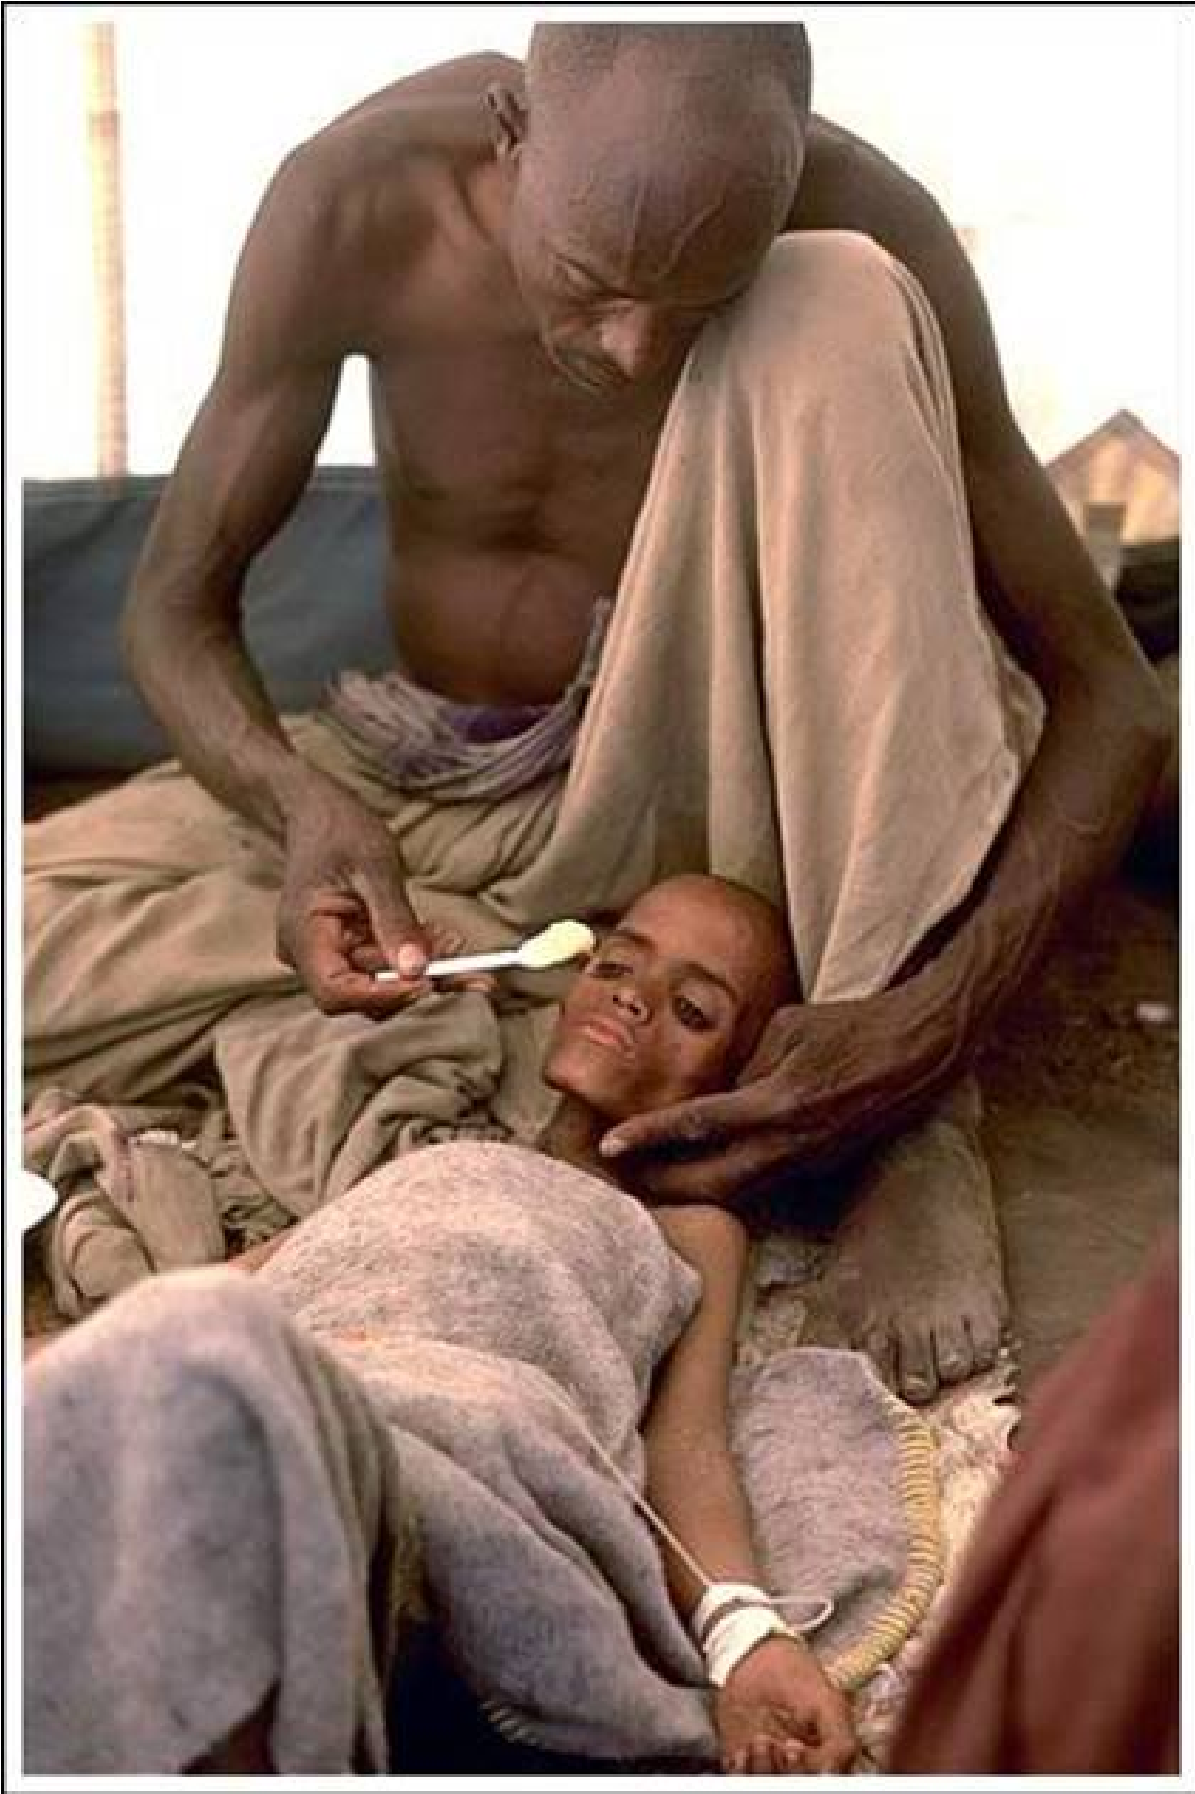

Leaders from the wealthy eight world bank countries - the G8 - will discuss tomorrow and spending of a meeting in London next week.

The group is under pressure to provide more meaningful aid, especially for Africa.

The catastrophe is expected to continue.

Đó là nỗi đói khát giữa những người nghèo.

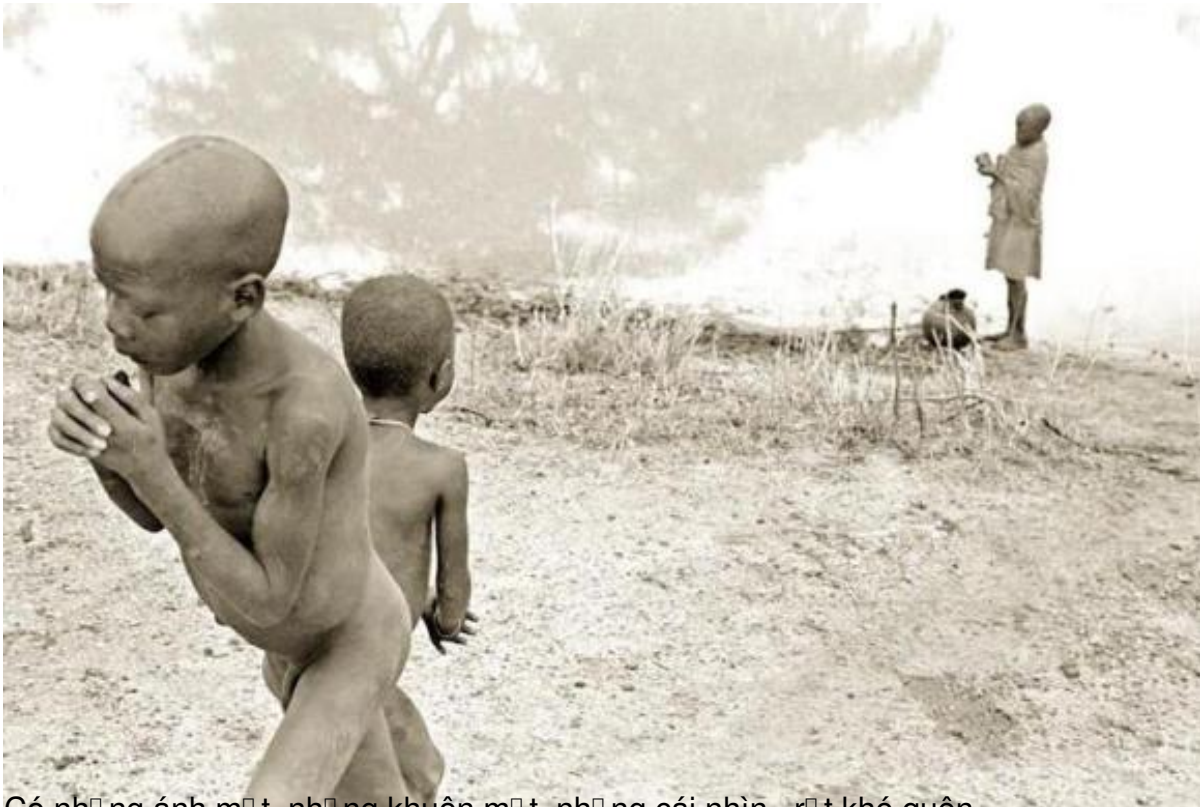

Đúng rồi, "tiểu bò" chúng tôi vẫn còn khát bên đó là chuyện bình thường. Nhìn hình mà thấy
